DECIDES AGAINST
CITY ELECTION.*Judge Van Swearingen Hands Down Opinion in Mandamus Proceeding.*WE WILL WAIT TWO YEARS

Court Holds That Act of 1911, Amending Third Class City Government and Election Keeps Connellsville
From Holding Municipal Election
This Fall.

There will be no primary or election for third class city officials in Connellsville this year. Judge J. Q.
Van Swearingen at 10 o'clock today morning handed down an opinion and a decree deciding against an election in the mandamus proceedings brought by Capt. John L. Unns of Connellsville against County Commissioners John S.
Langley, Edna S. McClellan and W. S. Hanes. Captain Unns brought the action, which was argued on last Friday, to force the County Commissioners to place his name on the primary ballot for City Controller. Judge Van Swearingen holds that Connellsville was not a third class city when the new third class city legislation was passed and that Connellsville, because of the provisions of this Act of Assembly, will not come into third class city government until 1913. Judge Van Swearingen's opinion is as follows:

According to the last United States census the borough of Connellsville had a population in excess of 10,000 and it took the necessary steps, under the act of May 23, 1908, P. L. 277, to become a city of the third class, and letters patent were issued by the Governor under the Great Seal of the Commonwealth, under date of May 12, 1911, defining the limits of the city and constituting the same a third class city and constituting the same a body corporate and politic by the name of the city of Connellsville. The petitioner, John L. Unns, filed in the office of the County Commissioner a petition to have his name printed on the ballot as a candidate for City Controller in the primary election to be held on September 11, 1911. The County Commissioners refused to print the name of the petitioner, as such candidate, on the ballot to be used at said primary election, and the petitioner prayed the court to issue a mandamus compelling them to do so. In a statement attached to the petition the parties have waived all preliminary and have agreed that the court shall decide the matter on the merits. The court is of the opinion that the petitioner is entitled to have his name printed on the ballot and a preliminary decree was entered in favor of the petitioner. Judgment shall be entered generally for the defendant.

After outlining the method of transferring towns and boroughs into cities of the third class, Section 3 of the Act of the Act of May 23, 1908, P. L. 277, provides: "All the property and debts of the towns and boroughs of the third class, which shall have thus become a city of the third class, are hereby severally and specifically vested in and under the control and management of the city or body politic of said city, by the name, style and title given therein and the charter of the city or body politic, and the charter of the city or body politic shall continue in full force and effect, and all officers and employees of the city or body politic shall continue in full force and effect, until the first Monday of April following the first Monday of February next succeeding the first Monday of December, 1912, at which time the officers of said city chosen at the election of the city or body politic shall enter upon their respective terms of service, and the city government shall be organized under this act. All suits, proceedings, real and personal actions, shall thereupon become transferred to the said city, which, in all suits pending, shall be substituted as party defendant in lieu of the town or borough, and all suits and actions, whether payable presently or in future, existing against the said town or borough, shall be paid by the city or body politic, and the city or body politic shall be bound by the words 'first Monday of April following the first Monday of February next succeeding the first Monday of December, 1912' of the Act of 1908
as amended by striking out the words
'first Monday of December of the first odd-numbered year.'

Section 2 of the Act of 1911, amending the Act of 1908, provides: "From and after the passage of this Act, all municipal elections in cities of the third class shall be held on the Tuesday next following the first Monday of November of each odd-numbered year, commencing in the year of one thousand nine hundred and eleven. In the year one every two years thereafter, members of

Destruction of French Battleship May Have Been Part of Terrible Plot.

United Press Telegram.
TOULON, France, Sept. 26.—
That the destruction of the magnificent battleship Liberte may have been the result of a terrible plot to destroy the entire navy is a suspicion that is rapidly gaining ground among naval officials today.

The many mysterious fires in the naval arsenal here, the accidents to ships in dry docks, and finally the fact that the Liberte was destroyed last night, which required a desperate battle to extinguish, has caused the board of officials to intimate that a most wild investigation is necessary. It is understood that the French Secret Service has been ordered to take charge of the matter at once.

The fire on the Liberte was near the powder magazines. They were immediately flooded and the fire finally extinguished.

The naval officers place the Liberte dead at 435, but these figures will be revised when toll calls are completed on the ship and the number of men on board.

Today numerous parties of men are boring holes through the plates of the demolished ship. Five sailors who were imprisoned in the debris, were rescued this afternoon, none the worse for their experience. It is thought others may be imprisoned alive in the ruins.

Taft at Fair; Talks to Farmers

United Press Telegram.
HUTCHINSON, Kan., Sept. 26.—There was no political atmosphere about the visit of President Taft to the State fair here today. He was in the history of Kansas and a brief address of the President, was the main feature of the day. He was warmly received by the people of the State and his speech was scheduled to describe the progress of the State.

None of the big issues of the day were mentioned. An academic discussion of the troubles of "bleeding Kansas" in the turbulent days of slavery struggle occupied practically all of his time. In expressing his grief for the death of Judge Madison the President said:

"The death was a great shock to me.
I had not known him long, but I knew him well. I knew him to be a man of high character and of great staying qualities of his mind and heart, his judicial instinct, his intense dedication to duty, his clear perception of the law and his high level of headness as a legislator."

SECTION HAND IS SHOT BY TRAMP.*Two Hoboes Attempted to Steal Dinner Pails and Trouble Followed.*AFFRAY AT YOWLER SIDING

Foreman Harry Gordon and Angelo Desanti Started After Men Who Swiped Their Noon-Day Meal and Angelo Got Bullet in Side.

Frustrated in their attempt to steal four dinner pails belonging to the section men under Foreman Harry Gordon, two hoboes attacked the foreman and one of his men, Angelo Desanti, with the result that Angelo was shot through the side and sustained a scalp wound. The trouble occurred near the Yowler siding, between Greeno Junction and Indiana Creek, about 12:15 this afternoon.

When Gordon's men laid down their tools and started for the point where they had left their dinner pails, they found four buckets missing.
Gordon and Angelo started up the track in search of the thief and came upon two hoboes. The men had the pails. Gordon and Angelo demanded their return and a hand to hand combat followed. The man Angelo attacked pulled a gun and fired. The bullet took effect in the Italian's side and he dropped.

Gordon saw the plight of his laborer and dropped the struggle with the other hobo. As he gave his attention to Angelo the other two men made their escape. They started in the direction of Indiana Creek.

Angelo was placed on a hand car and brought here where he was removed to the hospital. His condition is serious. The police here were notified but the shooting occurred behind their jurisdiction.

Angelo, the wounded Italian, is about 25 years old and was well known along the section where he is employed.

At Indiana Creek it was stated at 1:30 this afternoon that no men answering the description of the two hoboes were seen in that neighborhood since the shooting. Orders were issued for trainmen to watch all outbound freight trains that the men might not escape in that direction.

October 12, 1905, in Dunbar township,
and desertion was charged.

Elizabeth J. Evans against William Evans. They were married on March 22, 1910, in Uniontown. The wife charges cruel and barbarous treatment alleging that her husband threatened to murder her on various occasions and in addition was an absolute drunkard.

Daley Green Hunter against George Hunter, charge of cruel treatment. The pair were married October 14, 1898, at Washington, Pa. She is now living in Uniontown and he at Washington.

Wheel on Carriage Breaks Down; Party Has Narrow Escape From Injury.

A party composed of Mr. and Mrs.
James P. Scott, Harry Miller, Earl Wynn, all of town, Misses Besse and Lena Colborn of Scottsdale and Paul and Ray Goller of Harrisville, Pa., while driving from Connellsville to Addison, on last Sunday had a narrow escape from being badly injured when a wheel on the carriage broke and came off, throwing all the occupants from the carriage. Early Sunday morning the party hired a three-seated carriage and started to drive from Connellsville to Addison to visit relatives. When they were almost at Addison there was a slight accident to the axle. After having the broken portion repaired they decided to abandon the trip to Addison and were on their way back to Connellsville when the wheel came off and the carriage was upset.

Mr. Scott's injuries were the most painful and as a result of the accident he is confined to his home on Johnston avenue. While no bones were broken he is badly bruised and one leg is swollen. Miss Besse Col-born suffered a slight injury to the spine and Earl Wynn was also slightly injured. Harry Miller and Wynn returned to Connellsville yesterday morning while the remainder of the party arrived here yesterday afternoon.

School Board
in a Deadlock

A petition was presented and a rule granted in court at Uniontown this morning in the case of the Meadow Run School Board. The petition relates that the School Board consisting of George Cox, Smith, Rose,
Charles Corral, W. S. Craft, Riley Christopher and N. B. Conwell has failed to elect a teacher for the Meadow Run school for the present term; that Bill G. Horner for many terms had successfully taught in the school and was an applicant for the 1911 term, but failed to be elected and as a consequence the school had not been opened because George Cox, Smith Rose and Charles Corral, members of the board, had insisted upon voting for applicants who are related to them, causing a deadlock.
The petition was signed by Robert Wilkinson, William McCann and Frank McCann.

A rule was granted on the entire School Board, returnable in 15 days, to show cause why they should not be removed from office.

34,000 Readers
Located Here

In Connellsville are located 34,000 subscribers to newspapers and magazines, besides those that purchase their reading matter at the news stands each week or month, as the case may be. That there are many of this class is indicated by the fact that at bunches of papers and magazines were delivered to the dealers through the postoffice during a single month.

The investigation now pending to determine the cost of handling second class mail matter required that a count be made of the papers and magazines delivered during the month of August.
The count terminated yesterday.
At the Connellsville office, Postmaster Kirby reports 34,000 papers and magazines were delivered to individual subscribers and 61 bundles to the news dealers.

a white streak on its face and a sore on the right shoulder. It was hitched to a buggy with a red running gear that was made in Altoona.

TUESDAY EVENING, SEP. 26, 1911.

JUDGE VAN SWEARINGEN ON CITY GOVERNMENT.

Judge Van Swearingen has sustained the contention of the County Commissioners that Conneltsville cannot this year under the wording of the law enter upon city government, for which our citizens almost unanimously voted in 1910, but that we must remain a borough until 1913. The court admits the unreasonableness of the situation, but blames it upon the Legislature. The learned judge says:

It may seem unreasonable that the election of city officers and the organization of city government under the city charter shall be postponed for more than two years after the granting of the letters patent, but that it is the effect in this case of what the Legislature has enacted, and by that enactment the courts are bound.

It is quite plain that some of the law cited by the relator's counsel in support of his demand was clearly inapplicable. This question is necessarily determined by the language of the law regulating the manner in which boroughs still under borough government become cities, and not by the laws regulating cities already under city government.

The only defect in the case, as we have repeatedly pointed out, is the construction of the language of the Act of June 21st, 1911, which says that "the charters of the towns and boroughs shall continue in full force and effect, and all officers under the same hold their respective offices until the first Monday of December of the first odd numbered year next succeeding the issuing of the letters patent."

The Court has contended that "the first odd numbered year succeeding the issuing of the letters patent" is the present year, for the reason that the letters patent were issued prior to the passage of the Act, and that if the Legislature had otherwise intended the act would have read "the first odd numbered year next succeeding the YEAR OF the issuing of the letters patent." In view of the doubt expressed about the matter, we have urged that it be taken into court for judicial determination. This has been done. The decision is final. Conneltsville will be deprived from electing city officers this year. It is now too late to take the case to the courts of last resort, even if any candidate were so disposed.

In the meantime, however, it is interesting to note that the same question was raised in Pottsville and decided in favor of a city election; and that the decision seems to have been accepted as good law. We consequently have the unique spectacle of an approaching election in which one borough which voted to become a city will elect city officers while another is denied that privilege. If Pottsville is wrong, her election may be upset, her city officers thrown out, and the old borough administration set back in office again; if Pottsville is right, Conneltsville will still be deprived of the privilege of becoming a city for two more years, because the time for nominations and elections will have passed.

Conneltsville's city government is the victim of circumstance.

The ten-cent drowning story featured by a contemporary was not verified by the investigation of the Inquest. Newspaper romancing doesn't pay.

It is to be hoped that the Bullskin township telephone company will do a more profitable business than the Springfield township company has done.

The murder of a foreign mine boss in West Virginia suggests the thought that perhaps the foreign miners may not have the same respect for authority on the part of a countryman that they accord to an American foreman.

Some of the Fayette county primary candidates are developing the gift of oratory in this campaign.

Indian Creek is about to have a Union Station. Conneltsville, up to date, has only hope.

The people just won't stop buying The Courier dictionary.

A broken neck is a hard thing to repair.

Fayette county holds her own as the first coal and coke producing county in Pennsylvania or in the nation. We are not down and out yet.

This is the season of pumpkin pies and big pumpkins.

Conneltsville's city campaign seems to have collapsed, and the funny part about it is that the politicians are all blaming it on each other.

It is rumored that many of the holders of liquor licenses are somewhat puzzled over the untimely decision by reason of the fact that they will not have to pay 150% increase in license taxes.

Scotchdale is still in an evangelistic mood.

Political and social unrest is not confined to the United States. Canada gave us an example of it and all Europe is said to be afflicted with it. Insurgency is everywhere rampant, but saving common sense will eventually come to the rescue in most countries, especially in the United States.

Special to The Courier.

SCOTTSVILLE, Sept. 26.—Frank Horne, an employee of the Scottsville plant of the American Sheet & Tin Plate Company, was severely burned last evening while firing up No. 2 pair furnace for re-rolling at mid-night. Four mills were to go on after being idle for several weeks while the engine was being changed, and Mr. Horne was engaged in firing up the furnace. One of the furnaces had accumulated in the furnace and exploded, puffing out a flame, striking the man along the side of the face, both arms and one shoulder, burning him severely. He was given the first aid treatment and was taken in a buggy to his home on Spring street. Mr. Horne was formerly a resident of East Scottsville. There is still another Frank Horne, a mill worker living at the White school house, and a third Frank Horne, an employee of the Electric car shops at Freedom. It was variously reported that the other Frank Hornes were the victims of the accident.

Rousing Meetings.
The United Brethren church was almost filled yesterday afternoon for the Bible reading of John A. Davis and in the evening the place was literally packed with an interested audience. As many said it seemed like one of the tabernacle meetings of last fall. Mr. Davis was at his best last evening and preached a sermon along the line of what the young Christians should do to grow in grace. He likened the Christian life to the material life and how each requires food to grow. Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Wood, the former the superintendent of the tabernacle building, arrived last evening from Pittsburgh, where they have closed their work. Mr. Davis said last evening that the committee in charge at Pittsburg had agonized his wisdom and opposite to their promise placed the tabernacle in the slum districts. He said that the expensive plant did not belong there but near the churches where it could have the direct aid of the churches. He said that there were souls to save in the slums, that was admitted without any argument, but that the slum workers can reach the people there the best of any. The results, therefore, were not in proportion to what they should be with the tabernacle working in its proper field. Nor were the results what they would have been if the regular slum workers had been given the same amount of work. He showed how the use of improper food works harm instead of good, and that the right use of the right food in Christian life is just as important as in the every day material life. There will be a meeting at 7:30 this evening which will close the conference. Messrs. Davis and Mills had a number of meetings at the mills about town yesterday and an afternoon meeting at the Y. M. C. A.

Cards Up Again.
Steiner Brothers, the tobaccoists, had their store room repainted and repacked last week and their gallery of candidates' cards, the largest one in town probably, was taken down. Now the gallery is again on the line, card after card, in a string clear along the store room. The Scottsville House has the next sized gallery of candidates' cards.

Streets Paved.
Grant avenue and a part of Freedom avenue, between Grant avenue and Short street are now paved, and will be opened to travel. It is claim-

YOUR SOUR, GASSY, UPSET STOMACH WILL FEEL FINE IN FIVE MINUTES.

A Little Diapepsin Will Promptly Regulate Any Bad Stomach.

You can eat anything your stomach craves without fear of indigestion or Diapepsin, or that your food will ferment or sour on your stomach, if you will take a little Diapepsin occasionally.

Your meals will taste good, and anything you eat will be digested; nothing can ferment or turn into acid or poison or stomach gas, which causes belching, flatulency, a feeling of fullness after eating, Nausea, indigestion (like a lump of lead in stomach), Bloating, Heartburn, Water brash, Pain in stomach and intestines or other symptoms. Headaches from the stomach are absolutely unknown where this effective remedy is used. Diapepsin really does all the work of a healthy stomach. It digests your meals when your stomach can't. A single dose will digest all the food you eat and leave nothing to ferment or sour and upset the stomach.

Get a large 50-cent case of Pappe's Diapepsin from your druggist and start taking now, and in a little while you will actually brag about your healthy, strong stomach, for you then can eat anything and everything you want without the slightest discomfort or misery, and every particle of impurity and gas that is in your stomach and intestines is going to be carried away without the use of laxatives or any other assistance.

Should you at this moment be suffering from indigestion or any stomach disorder, you can get relief within five minutes.

ed that the use of a pinch bar on Grant avenue would show that the paving is put down loosely and without any tightening. Askes are being put down on Chestnut street, between Market street and Pittsburg street, and the people are anxiously waiting for the brick to be laid along there.

TRIFLING $2,000 ONLY OBSTACLE.

Subscribe That Much Stock
and See Basketball
Hall Built.

ONE WEEK TO DO IT IN

Work Will Be Started October 1 If Required Amount Is Secured—No
Mid-Season Pausing of Hat or Other Financial Schemes to Be Worked.

Those Cokers have a new ball—maybe. The plans and specifications have been drawn and the Connelleville Construction Company is willing to erect the building. The only bar to the trifling amount of treasury stock the company now has unsubscribed. If this stock—$2,000 of it—is taken up during the next week, the building will start in bright and early next Monday morning and within 30 days the new structure will be ready for occupancy.

The Connelleville Athletic Association—which gets its name in print only during the off season and may be explained to lay minds as being the corporate name of the basketball team—has secured two lots on Fifth street, West Side, a few steps beyond the West Side Auditorium where games were played last year. It is prepared to erect a $6,500 building seating 1,200 people—providing the $2,000 is forthcoming. The building will be frame, with a sheet iron covering. There will be 400 reserved seats—50 cents please—and 800 that will not be reserved. Besides the 1,200 seating capacity there will be standing room for so many more that Uniontown can bring the whole village down the first time it plays here and there will be room for them.

The men interested in the team are confident that basketball will be a profitable venture here providing the hall can be secured. The seating capacity last year was limited and 600 people in the hall made it look like a full house. The number of really desirable seats was so small that every time a stranger came he left disgusted. It wasn't anybody's fault, because the best had to be made of a bad bargain. Then, too, the playing floor wasn't regulation size, which interfered with the team's work.

The new floor will be maple. It will be the size required by the rules, 35 by 60 feet. It will give the team a chance to play real basketball abroad and at home. It will give the spectators, no matter how many of them there happens to be, an opportunity to see the whole game without peering forth interstitions upon the head of the unfortunate who sold him the ticket.

The hall is to be built along the lines followed by Uniontown, although improvements will be made. At the end where the main entrance will be located there will be more room than in Uniontown, the office being located outside the hall proper rather than inside. The suspension type cage will be used, doing away with posts against which players are liable to injure themselves. There will be two dressing rooms, each equipped with shower baths for the players. The building is to have eight exits.

It was announced yesterday afternoon that Captain Kid Dark is to have entire charge of the team. The directors are not to interfere. In handling players unless requested to by the team captain. Dark was in Connelleville yesterday afternoon for a conference with the management and left last night for the east. He will try to secure players for the team. Although there need be little change from last season's lineup, Captain Dark has been directed to round up any promising player he may locate and not a single Coker is sure of his job. There is little likelihood of last year's regulars being displaced, however, if they report in time and play the game they put up last year. The most serious problem facing Dark is at center. The management has received no official word if he does it is probable there will be one or more other candidates. Dark has his lines out for some good men that will make the Auburn half-center hero get busy and play the game as it should be played. It is an open secret that Dark was far from satisfied with Ahern's work towards the end of last season and the Kid is not one to stand for shirking. He knows Ahern's worth, and proposes to see that who ever jumps the center plays the game right up to the hilt.

As last year was the first splash the Cokers made in the league the fans were content to beat Uniontown out. This year they are after a pennant determinedly and propose to leave no stone unturned to land it. With the McKeesport champions transferred to Uniontown, the conquest of that village will not be as easy as last season. Harry Hough, the South Side star, will not be back this year and South Side cannot be considered a pennant winner, unless they develop unlooked for strength. There will be three contenders for the flag. Connelleville, Johnstown and Uniontown, and the Cokers look as good as the best.

New basketball hall? Look for the answer next week!

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS.

FOR COUNTY TREASURER,

William S. Craft
Luzerne Township.

Letters From Maj. General D. McM. Gregg, Reading, Pa., and Col. and Brig. General John P. Taylor of Reading, Pa., Under Whom He Served During the Civil War.

Reading, Pa., May 6th, 1911.

Dear Captain Craft: I am informed that you are a candidate for the office of Treasurer of Fayette County. I sincerely hope that you will be nominated, and elected by an overwhelming majority. If the measure of your claims upon the suffrage of the people of your county, be applied to a rival candidate, (unless the latter be an equally deserving old soldier) it should give you such an advantage as to make your election sure.

I am always interested in the candidacy of an old soldier for an office or position for which he is fitted, and when the old soldier is one who served under my command, and whose record I know to be good, like yours, then I am doubly interested. Your fine record as an officer of the First Pennsylvania Cavalry, the loss of your limb in that hotly contested engagement at Haws Shop in May 1861, will certainly secure you the support of your fellow old soldiers, and other voters should be glad of an opportunity of showing their gratitude to one who served them so well in the great war that was waged in defense of their country.

Trusting that you are well and with my best wishes for your success.

Sincerely yours,

D. McM. Gregg.

My Dear Captain: It gives me great pleasure to know you are a candidate for nomination for Treasurer in your home county. Your record as a soldier is almost unimpaired. The records show that you were mentioned in General orders a number of times for distinguished services on the battlefield. Changing your promotion from a private to Captain of your company, I am glad I can say you were one of the most efficient officers in my regiment, being on duty constantly until the loss of your leg at Haws Shop, Va., May 28, 1861. In that engagement the official records show that the two battalions you commanded used 17,000 rounds of cartridges. I want to say to all comrades and others that you were a brave soldier, an honorable and upright gentleman, and in my opinion in every way fitted to fill the office of County Treasurer to the entire satisfaction of the people. I only wish I could reach you with my vote.

I am very truly,

John P. Taylor.

The Gamblers.

The Story of Charles Klein's Greatest Play.

Copyright, 1910, by the M. J. Connelley Publishing Company.

As the young man paused, his face shining with the passionate earnestness of his speech, his father slowly passed his thin, delicate hand across his eyes, and was silent for several minutes.

He was thinking—thinking—thinking! Down there in the street he had felt for years a great, overwhelming, irresistible power, growing steadily, surely, terribly—the money trust. Less than a dozen men control so much money that it would stagger an adding machine to record the figures, and stun the reason if it attempted to grasp the magnitude of a tithe of the sum.

It has no part in the petty struggles of the stock exchange or raids on the cotton market, any more than the head of a theatrical trust might be interested in the quarrels of ticket speculators. When it wants a railroad or an industry it goes quietly into the market and buys it, uses it as long as it suits its plans, and then turns it back. Steadily and surely as a great glacier it is advancing its power—and this was the power that young Wilbur Emerson wanted to meet in the lists of Wall Street.

The elder Emerson did not call it the Money Trust. He did not know of its existence. But with the instinct of a banker he had felt a powerful and sinister influence in the world of finance. That was all. He did not feel that Wilbur need necessarily come into direct conflict with an invincible opposition, or that his rise would be watched by dangerous, jealous eyes.

He looked at the young man's strong, eager face and was instantly reassured. Whatever the fight might be, he felt that his boy would be equal to it. But there was always the lingering doubt.

He rose slowly and held out his hand. "Very well, my boy," he said. "In a instant Wilbur had seized his hand in a fierce grip, his eyes sparkling with joy. "Father! he almost shouted. "Do you mean it?"

The elder man put both hands on his boy's shoulders and looked into his eyes. "Listen, my boy," he said gently. "Yes, I mean it. I would rather you did not go on with the project of a chain of banks, but do not imagine that you are doing it against my will. When I give you my consent I give it freely and fully. But, Wilbur, my son, you will grant me permission to think that it is not best."

"I have taught you to love truth. You are going where you will have to lie. I have taught you self-sacrifice. You will now have to sacrifice others."

"For a young man of today, you have learned father to love your neighbor as yourself, and I have never known you to do a mean or dishonorable thing. Now you will have to knock your neighbor down and trample on him."

"Not! Never mind arguing about it! I know you don't agree with me on that or you wouldn't want to follow this plan. But you are determined, aren't you?"

"I am, father, if it rests with me," said the young man gravely.

"Then—go ahead! And"—his voice broke, his eyes grew moist, and from the bottom of his true old New England heart he added fervently: "God be with you!"

CHAPTER III. OVERREACHED.

HIS father's consent won, Wilbur Emerson lost no time in making his dream a reality. His plans had all been made and tested long ago. He had carefully chosen his associates, and he had no doubt that when the great project was put to the men he had selected they would be only too glad to become stockholders in and directors of the Emerson Banking Company, which was to be the name of the holding company of the new chain of banks.

One man—Fred Tooker—he had taken into his confidence long before he had gained his father's consent to the expansion programme. Tooker was an older man, and the head of a solid financial institution not quite so large nor so influential as the Emerson Bank. He was a courteous, level-headed man, and thoroughly agreed with Emerson that the time had come for either expansion or slow financial death.

He had Tooker in his office early the next morning, and in a few words made clear to him at last the resources of the Emerson Bank were in his hands.

"We are all ready to go ahead now, Fred, if the other two that I suggested will come in."

"They'll come in all right," replied the older man, in a quiet drawl. "You can trust Raymond and Cowper to come into anything where they see a chance to make a million out of another man's brain."

"I'm not so much afraid that George Cowper won't come in as that he may get cold feet after he is in," commented Emerson.

"Oh, Cowper'll be all right!" declared Tooker, easily. "He was a genial, middle-aged man, with a shrewd blue eye and gray hair. 'I wouldn't feel easy about him myself if he was to carry the flag, but he'll be all right in the ranks with Raymond and me."

"Your father'll be president and you'll be the real general because it's your scheme, and I'm free to admit that you know more about banking in a minute than I'll ever know in my life—and I know a thing or two, at that."

"And Raymond?" Tooker grinned. "Well, I guess there'll be times when Otis will chew his ear a lot and growl like a chorus of ravens, but his game to go through with anything he starts I've known him longer than you have, Emerson, and you mustn't pay any attention to his flimsy ways. If he comes around bothering you, just tell him it's your busy day and he'll go outside and guess, and that'll be all there'll be to it."

Emerson laughed with his friend and then asked:

"Is there anything you want to suggest, Fred, before we have the formal meeting?"

Tooker's good-natured face instantly took on a business-like look.

"There's nothing I want to suggest, exactly, Emerson," he said, slowly. "But I do want to have a little heart-to-heart talk with you."

Emerson met his gaze with a direct, frank glance and nodded.

"The way the thing stands now," continued Tooker, "as soon as we four get together—or five, with your father—and form this company, we will have in our hands four banks that are so solid that they make Gibraltar look like lemon meringue—banks that can pay about four and a half on the dollar to-morrow."

"Now, the scheme is to take our surplus and form more banks and get more business, always standing inside of a line where we could pay—well, a little better than dollar for dollar, if we were jammed into a receivership."

Emerson nodded again. Tooker was silent for a moment and then he began again, even more slowly and deliberately.

"I don't see anything wrong with the scheme, Emerson, or you can gamble that I wouldn't be going in hook, line and sinker; but there's one thing that possibly you haven't considered as deeply as I have, and that's what I wanted to talk to you about."

"Of course, you know that we are not going to parade into millions down a bumpy path of roses. This crowd"—he nodded toward the windows that looked down into Wall street—"are not going to let us get very big if they can help it. They all want all of it themselves."

"Personally, I don't think they can stop us. We've got too much cash. Now, you're going to run this thing and you're going to run it unpursued by superfluous suggestions from me. My last word is. Don't let them catch us short of cash or they may hang up our hides on those iron pickets in front of Trinity as a warning to anybody else who is thinking about butting into their game."

Emerson laughed, and Tooker joined him with a grin that was only half mischievous.

"Don't worry about that, Fred," said the young man. "We'll take care that they don't catch us napping."

Within forty-eight hours after this conversation the new banking company was formed and the day that it was duly incorporated saw the beginning of the activity of Wilbur Emerson as a power in Wall street.

There is no need to go into the details of the formation of the chain of banks. A story of its rise, of the combinations, of the tricks, of the duels, of the pitched battles—though teeming with the romance of money—would read like a banking statement from a financial journal.

But there was one little group of men who met formally or informally every day, that never missed a move of the new Rupert of finance or a detail or skirmish of his campaign.

They watched with keen interest that was untiring with alarm, though his banks sprang up over night and took business away from their own in a day. They ate an eagerly and slept as well as if young Emerson had never penetrated his father to let him peep on their preserves.

They knew just how much cash he had, how much he had in instantly convertible securities, and how much in solid securities that might not be readily marketable. They were waiting—waiting. Every time he opened a new bank, they smiled and murmured, "Pretty soon!"

At last he had a string of twelve banks all going along nicely, but he had wrung the last drop of blood from his resources to establish them. It was now only a question of months until every one of them would be in condition to weather any sort of financial storm.

It was at this time that the little group of men, aforementioned, met one afternoon as usual. They yawned and looked into each other's eyes and smiled a little wearily.

"Well," said one of them, languidly, "I guess we might as well go and do it now."

The others yawned again and nodded, and then they went out and hurried a few million dollars' worth of stock at a restless market.

The market gasped and staggered. The gentlemen were mildly surprised that it only gasped and staggered, so they betted it with a few millions more.

The market reeled, and there was a scramble to get out from under.

Another blow.

The market came down in ruins, and men with foam-flecked lips fought and tore at the tellers' windows in the banks and brokerage offices.

Their gods had stricken them with the madness of panic.

And their cries went out over the face of the land and all that the sound reached were driven mad.

The merchant closed the shutters of his counting room.

The factory fires were drawn.

The steamboats were tied up to the levees and docks and the rolling stock rusted in the railroad yards.

White-faced, tortured men put pistols to their temples. Hollow-eyed women and children cried for food that was not given them.

The world shuddered.

All this had been done by that little group of men in "the crooked street" between a grave and a river; on that afternoon they decided that Wilbur Emerson must be obliterated from the map of the money world.

And Emerson? He looked at the ticker and thought that he had gone crazy. He called up a trusted broker and in a few minutes the situation was made clear. When he hung up the receiver and leaned back to collect his thoughts he was paler than he had ever been in his life, but he was calm and confident. The final, the supreme struggle was upon him at last.

He was not such an optimist as to think that this was a chance break. Public confidence had never been better. The market had been deliberately broken and just at the time when his affairs were in their most delicate condition. He knew what had happened just as well as if he had been present at the meeting that day.

Before he could even get into communication with his banks, Tooker dashed into his private office. He had been out to lunch.

THE SOISSON.

"The Dolly Dimple Girls" Tonight.

For many years the name of Golden and Collins has been a by-word with lovers of good burlesque when members of the Dolly Dimple Girls company. The management has arranged with one of the best composers in New York to write two brand new, up to date burlesques. New and gorgeous costumes have been secured and all the latest and best of the season's song hits have been placed in the show along with a number written especially for this company. Twenty of the prettiest chorus girls that could be secured are with this company; among those who will take part are Golden and Collins, May Burns, May Collins, the Johnsons, Ray Sisters, Jack Henry and "The Girl in the Window." The Dolly Dimple Girls come to the Soisson tonight.

"The Gamblers" comes to the Soisson Friday, Sept. 29. This latest great play of Charles Klein's vividly reproduces certain interesting phases of contemporary American life. A technical point in the banking laws seems likely to send an innocent man to prison, and his son chafes in a card game to save his father and open the way for his own conviction. Then there is the wife of the Federal prosecutor who was formerly wooed by the man it becomes her husband's duty to try to send to jail. When the man sought by the authorities robs the home of the investigator, and incidentally that of the woman he loved, and is surprised by the husband, the play reaches a climax that is declared irresistible. In New York where the play ran for over 200 performances at Maxine Elliott's theatre, the critics pronounced "The Gamblers" a gripping Wall Street drama with an unswerving human appeal.

She Had Consumption Was Dying; Now Well

Eckman's Alternative is being used with success in the treatment of tuberculosis. Persons who have taken it improved, gained weight, resumed night sweats stopped, fever diminished, and many recovered. If you are interested to know more about it, we will put you in touch with some who are now well. You can investigate and judge for yourself. Head of Mrs. Gov. H. C. Griffith, Ind.

Gentlemen: Thinking that perhaps a short history of the remarkable cure of my mother-in-law (Mrs. Anna Gover) might benefit some other sufferers, I hereby give the following testimonial: About September 10, 1908, she was taken sick with Catarrh of the Lungs, and continually grew worse, requiring a trained nurse. Night sweats were so bad that it was necessary to change her clothing once or twice every night; her cough increased and she was so weak that everybody expected that she would not live much longer. The trained nurse (Miss Anna Trinch) informed me that she had tuberculosis and nothing could be done for her. In January, when Mr. Wm. H. H. of St. Michael's Church at St. Louis, Mo., prepared for her death, he recommended that I get some Eckman's Alternative, and see if it would not give her some relief. I then requested the attending physician to give his diagnosis and he informed me that she had Consumption and was beyond all medical aid. When I asked if he thought that it was useless to try the Alternative, he replied that "No physician could help her any, and I could only myself about it." So I immediately had Mr. Wm. H. H. sent for a bottle. Practically without hope for recovery, I insisted that she try the Alternative, which she did. At the end of three weeks' treatment, she was so well that she refused to take any more of it, but the doctor advised her to keep on taking it, as it was the only thing that might help her. I am glad to say now that she kept on and soon began to improve. Now, she weighs as much as ever, weighs twenty pounds heavier than she ever did before she took Eckman's Alternative. She is in good health. She frankly says she owes her life and health to Eckman's Alternative. We keep it on hand at all times and recommend it highly.

"Signed, ALBERT J. JOSE, GRIMMER."

Postman's Alternative is effective in Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung troubles, and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain poisons, opiates or habit-forming drugs. Ask for booklet of cured cases, and write to Eckman's Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for more evidence.

The Mt. Pleasant Township High School defeated the Mt. Pleasant Institute by the tremendous score of 13 to 1. Marty O'Toole, Christner, formerly star pitcher for the Keokuk nine, was pounded unmercifully to all corners of the lot. The feature of the game was the masterly pitching of Welch and the batting of Eaton, Welch and C. Hubbs.
